

Shareholders:

Questions to ask Who? Where? Who does it benefit? What will they receive? Why?

Who?

- Investors:
    - Those who own business or have invested in business that produce textile waste or who are in the businesses of the transport and logistics for fashion and textile waste.
  - Governments & governing bodies:
    - Who have issues with vast amounts of textile waste, landfill and require solutions
  - Manufacturers :
    - Garment and textile manufacturers who create textile waste through their businesses
    - Fashion brands who need to streamline their inhouse waste systems
  - Customers
    - who buy from fashion brands that are interested in the supply chain and sourcing

What will they receive or gain?

- Everyone:
  - Better environments and habitat for everyone
  - Less use of landfill or dumping waste into the ocean
  - Everyone who is participating or who would like to, should also have access to the knowledge and reasons behind the need for the textile collection, what happens with it afterwards and how they can get involved or help.
- Investors, Governments and Manufacturers:
  - Will be able to fund and implement necessary changes faster than smaller organisations, companies and individuals
  - Be able to promote the benefits of being in such a system
- Manufacturers
  - will receive a certified status of being part of a circular production system (and the fact they are not contributing to waste
  - Will be able to provide their Employees (and communities working for any of manufacturers or any of the above) with access to any jobs created by implementing a textile waste system
  - Some may currently pay to have their waste disposed of and may be looking for a more efficient or unique collection of waste
- Employees
  - Will have the benefit of caring for the product they are helping to make as well as the product made from the waste
  - Education around the systems and the knowledge will be shared and integrated in the business ethics as a standard basic.
- Customers
  - Will gain more confidence in product and way in which their clothing or products they buy are made

- who buy from fashion brands that are working with resourceful circular suppliers, would receive a reward for their loyalty purchases.

Where?

- Initially it would be ideal to focus collection systems of textiles in locations where garments are produced in large quantities
- I would initially try in in one location such a a collection of factories and producers in one city or area such as Barcelona to Mataro, then move it to a regional scale.
- It would be important to have people and investors who could see the benefits of the system and in a location where design and production is highly valued
- It could also simultaneously be started on a smaller scale within a network of hums and makerspaces.
- I also think it should be implemented on a growing global scale, initially on a case by case base, in places where there is need for recycling infrastructure and also funding towards this.
  - These could be places who have large communities of skilled artisans and producers, who would could be greatly supported by a recycling network; in my personal experience, countries such as Peru, Philippines, Bangladesh, India, Turkey, where producers are so often exploited and whose working conditions are not as highly monitored and invested in as European or western countries.
